INTRODUCTION.

"Catalogue of the Principal Officers of Vermont, as connected with its Political History, from 1778 to 1851, with some Biographical Notices, etc. By Leonard Deming, Middlebury, Vt." The foregoing book appeared in 1851, being published by the author. The next year a supplement was printed, containing the officers of 1852. This supplement was bound with the original volume, and most extant copies contain the two.

In 1912, the General Assembly directed the Secretary of State to cause to be prepared a revision of Deming's book, which should "conform to the original work, and contain data to and including the time of its publication." The present volume is the outcome of this enactment.

The direction that the revision should "conform to the original work" has been broadly interpreted. The arrangement of the lists of officers has been changed with a view to ease of reference. The gazetteer feature has been curtailed, since "Hemenway's Gazetteer" has covered the ground much more thoroughly for the whole state (except Windsor County.) But the chief innovation has been the addition of dates of birth and death, and in securing these a great part of the work of the revision has been expended.

The sources of these dates have been many. Deaths in the state since Jan. 1, 1857, are on record in the town clerks' offices, but very few death records of earlier years are to be found there. For earlier dates, cemeteries and family records have been largely consulted. Town histories and genealogies have contributed much information. Many correspondents throughout the state have interested themselves in research for men of their own localities, and their aid has been invaluable. In a few towns no such aid could be obtained, and deficiencies in the record of these towns are very manifest. The difficulties in tracing the earlier names on the lists are greater than would have been believed. For many of the "rude forefathers" there are no headstones to be found, either from original lack or from decay. Emigration from Vermont set in very early, and a large proportion of the prominent men of the earlier time ended their days outside the state. Many of these cannot be traced. To illustrate: of the first nine men on the representative list of the town of the editor's residence only two died in that town and but one other in the state.

A by-product of the search for dates of birth and death has been the correction of not a few errors in the names as given in the earlier lists. Some such doubtless still remain uncorrected. An addition to the original work is the Index of Names. A dash (—) after a name indicates its previous appearance in the same list. The dates are given only on the first appearance of the name. It is intended to give the residence in each case as it was at the beginning of the term of office.

It is needless to say that no attempt has been made to preserve the peculiar flavor which renders Deming's book one of the "curiosities of literature". In that respect the original edition can never be superseded.

MEMBERS OF THE COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

The Constitution of 1777 provided for a Council of Safety, to act as a provisional government until the regular government should be inaugurated, and appointed its members. This Council was in existence from July 8, 1777, to March 12, 1778.

Heman Allen, Colchester,	1740-1778	Thomas Chittenden, Williston,	1730-1797	Joseph Fay, Bennington,	1752-1803
Ira Allen, Colchester,	1751-1814	Jeremiah Clark, Shaftsbury,	1733-1817	Timothy Brownson, Sunderland,	1734-
Jacob Bayley, Newbury,	1728-1816	Nathan Clark, Bennington,	1718-1792	Moses Robinson, Bennington,	1741-1813
[1]Benjamin Carpenter, Guilford,	1726-1804	Jonas Fay, Bennington,	1737-1818	Paul Spooner, Hartland,	1746-1789

Thomas Chittenden served as President of the Council, Jonas Fay as Vice-President, Ira Allen as Secretary until Sept. 6, 1777, and Joseph Fay as Secretary thereafter.

MEMBERS OF THE COUNCIL.

The Council of twelve members was chosen by popular vote, and had the power of filling vacancies in its own number. It shared the executive power with the Governor, who presided over its meetings. In the earlier days it exercised a co-ordinate legislative power with the House of Representatives, but this power was later denied and the powers of the Council materially decreased. The Council of Censors of 1834 proposed an amendment to the Constitution abolishing the Council, which was adopted by the Convention of 1836.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

The members are arranged by towns, the latter being given alphabetically. Towns now non-existent which have ever been represented in the General Assembly appear in their order. A dash after the name of a representative indicates its previous appearance under the same town, the dates of birth and death being given but once.

By the Constitution of 1777, each town consisting of eighty taxable inhabitants was to choose two representatives during the period of seven years following the adoption of the Constitution, and each other inhabited town one representative; after that date each town was to be entitled to one representative.

The journal of the first House (that of March, 1777) contains no roll of members, and it is not easy to construct the roll with accuracy. The list made by the present editor differs somewhat from that of Deming. Apparently more members were in attendance at the June session than in March. A difficulty lies in the fact that committees appointed by the House were not always composed entirely of its own membership. Several members were "dismissed" or "expelled" at different times during the session of this first House, for reasons which do not appear on the record. All such are indicated.

ACTON

Windham County

Granted by Vermont as Johnson's Gore, Feb. 23, 1782; incorporated as Acton, Nov. 6, 1800, with right of representation only in connection with Townshend; this (unconstitutional) provision disregarded in 1824 and 1825, and repealed in 1825; organized March 3, 1801; annexed to Townshend Feb. 1, 1841.

CONVENTIONS HELD PRIOR TO ORGANIZATION OF STATE GOVERNMENT.

The recovery of the journals of these conventions and their publication in facsimile by Hon. Redfield Proctor has made it possible to construct their roll of membership with a close degree of exactness.

Convention Held at Dorset, January 16, 1776.

(Joseph Woodward, Chairman; Jonas Fay, Clerk.)

The minutes of this convention contain no list of delegates. The following persons are so mentioned as to leave no doubt of their being in attendance: Joseph Woodward (of Castleton); Jonas Fay (of Bennington); Moses Robinson (of Bennington); Samuel McCune (of Dorset); Oliver Evarts; Thomas Ashley (of Poultney); William Marsh (of Manchester); Heman Allen (of Middlebury); Abel Moulton; John McLane; Gamaliel Painter (of Middlebury); James Hard (of Arlington); Joseph Bowker (of Rutland); Timothy Brownson (of Sunderland.)

The following persons are also mentioned in the minutes, but in such manner as not to render their presence certain: James Breakinridge (of Bennington); Thomas Rowley (of Danby); Simeon Hathaway (of Bennington); Elijah Dewey (of Bennington); John Strong (of Addison); Zadock Everest (of Pawlet); Asahel Ward (of Addison.)

Convention held at Dorset, July 24, 1776.

[1]This Convention framed a Constitution and provided for the organization of a government for the state.
[2]Probable members.

COUNCILS OF CENSORS.

The Constitution of 1777 (in Chapter 2, Article 44) provided for the election on general ballot by the freemen every seven years of thirteen persons to be called a Council of Censors, among whose duties were to inquire into the observance of the Constitution by the several branches of the government during the preceding septenary, and to propose amendments to the Constitution, which last were to be finally passed on by a Convention to be called by the Censors. The last Council, that of 1869, proposed, among other amendments, one for its own abolition, which was ratified by the Convention of 1870.

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTIONS.

The Convention of 1791 was called to ratify the Constitution of the United States as a preliminary to the admission of Vermont to the Union; all the other Conventions passed upon constitutional changes proposed by the Councils of Censors. No roll of members of the Convention of 1786 has been discovered, and only such names have been supplied as are shown by the records of the several towns to have been elected—thirteen in all.

All Conventions except that of 1857 were composed of one delegate from each town, but the Convention of 1857 contained 90 delegates apportioned among the counties. The members of this Convention are to be found in the following list under the towns of their respective residence.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

The principal officers of the several counties follow. The residence given may be understood to be as it was at the beginning of the term indicated, no account being taken of removals during the term.

Until 1825 the presiding judge of county court was a resident of the county, chosen in the same manner as the other county officers. From 1825, Supreme Court judges were assigned to this duty, which arrangement continued until the appointment of superior judges in 1906, except for the years between 1850 and 1857, when a Circuit Court provided judges for this purpose.

These county officers (except the state's attorney) were chosen by the freemen from 1781 to 1786, and then appointed by the General Assembly until the adoption in 1850 of a constitutional amendment providing for their election by the freemen. State's attorneys were appointed by the county court until 1795; subsequently, in the same way as other county officers.

SPECIAL COURTS OF 1778.

March 17, 1778, at the first session of the General Assembly, two counties were established, Bennington west of the mountains and Unity east. The name of the latter was changed four days later to Cumberland. Judges were appointed for these March 24, and again at a later session of the same Assembly, June 17. The existence of these courts was temporary, and they have left no records. The names of the judges follow.
